European Science Parliament 2009 - 2010

Dear Sir or Madam,

In March 2010, the City of Aachen and the RWTH Aachen University will host the Second European Science Parliament (ESP). The ESP is a Conference designed to promote discussions on a range of topics in the domain of sciences, society and politics.

We would like to invite pupils and teachers of your school to compete for participation in this project.

The ESP is organised in two phases. The first phase is an online discussion via a web portal. The second phase will take place in Aachen, with live participation of those invited to join in a face-to-face discussion on the most interesting points.

'Water' has been selected the main topic for the European Science Parliament 2009-2010 at the beginning of June 2009. The ESP's online discussion on www.science-parliament.eu between pupils, students, private individuals, scientists, politicians and representatives from the field of science from all over Europe on that subject is now open. Discussions shall focus on all possible approaches to 'water', for example scientific aspects, socio-political problems and economical questions.

In the online discussion stage, participants of all ages and from across Europe will be invited to engage in discussions about key topics at a pan-European level. The web portal will provide information and many opportunities for those interested to jointly discuss the role of water. Only those registering and participating with relevant contributions at this Web Portal will be eligible to take part in the actual live ESP Conference. Contributions may simply be questions or opinions, although major contributions such as articles, research projects or the collective creation of a database, such as a bibliography or link list, will be greatly valued.

The 120 participants in the ESP Conference will comprise approximately 45 pupils and 25 university students as representatives of the younger generation, together with representatives from the fields of science and economics, NGOs, media and politics. At the ESP Conference, all conclusions reached and gathered on the website will be summarised as an 'Aachen Declaration', a collective viewpoint to be forwarded to European Institutions as a policy recommendation.

The online discussion and the ESP Conference will be held in English and supported by experienced moderators.

Conditions of participation:

1. Minimum age is 15 years.
2. Pupils must register via the website www.science-parliament.eu .
3. Pupils are expected to take an active part in the discussions.
4. Teachers are welcome to participate in the discussion.
5. There is no limit to the number of pupils from anyone school participating in online discussions. However, at the ESP Conference in Aachen, each school is to be represented by three pupils and one teacher only. Schools selected for participation will be notified in January 2010. Schools will decide upon the three participating pupils.
6. Decisions of the jury will be primarily based on the quality and relevance of the contributions to the themes. A maximum of two schools from each country will be invited. This is to ensure the greatest possible geographical distribution of participants in Europe.

Please see the attached schedule, which might help you when contacting schools and other participants.

We look forward to receiving numerous registrations and also a large active participation from pupils in this project. We hope that pupils from your school will be successful in being chosen for participation in the European Science Parliament!

For further information you are kindly asked to contact our partner Mosaica who is responsible for recruiting pupils and teachers for participation, and will take care of the organisation and implementation of a programme of special activities to take place within the framework of the ESP Conference.
